Navan Courthouse

The Courts Service is engaged in an ambitious programme to maintain and refurbish court buildings all around the country. An important element of this programme is the provision of modern and comfortable facilities for all users of the courts.

The new facilities at Navan confirm the commitment of the Service to meeting the needs of the District Court in the Navan area. At present court sittings take place one day each week and the new courthouse is designed to accommodate court users for the foreseeable future.

The facilities include a modern court room with Judge's Chambers, an office for the District Court Clerk, consultation rooms, legal practitioners' room and a holding room for prisoners. The accommodation is accessible for people with disabilities.

The first court sitting took place in the new courthouse in October 2003.

This brochure was produced on the occasion of the official opening of Navan courthouse by the Minister for Justice, Equality and Law Reform, Mr. Michael McDowell, T.D. on Monday, 5th April 2004.
